Community-Engaged Teaching

Federal Policy Fellows Program – Co-led with Dr. Matthew Bogenschutz – Federal Policy Fellows is a competitive, application-based program for social work students interested in gaining hands-on experience with policy advocacy at the federal level. The program began with 6 BSW students in 2015, and has expanded to include BSW and MSW students (10) in 2016. The program involves four seminars and a day-long experience in Washington, DC.

Richmond [Re]Visited – Faculty advisor in collaboration with Daryl Fraser and Stephanie Grady Odera – This day-long event is planned and implemented by a team of faculty, alumni and students (SSW Black Lives Matter Student & Faculty Collective) as an initiative aimed at raising the consciousness of social work students, staff, and faculty about the history and current reality of racial [in]justice in Richmond. The event was launched in fall 2015 with close to 100 participants from across all three programs in the School of Social Work.

Day at the Capitol – Co-led with Dr. Matthew Bogenschutz and SSW alumni – These opportunities began in 2013/2014 in an effort to engage social work students in state-level policy advocacy. Planned in partnership with School alumni who work in the Virginia General Assembly, students have an opportunity to learn how state policy-making happens and to engage with legislators, legislative staff, and lobbyists in the state capitol buildings.
